N.B.—In estimating the proportion of persons professing each religion to the total population, the religion has not been separately shown in districts where it is followed by less than one in ten thousand of the people, but is included there under the head of 'others' in the last column of this part of the Table. Similarly, in the second part of the statement the respective proportions of the sexes have not been shown for districts where the religion is followed by fewer than ten thousand persons.

* This proportion does not in all districts represent that of the tribes, as many members of the latter, especially in Thána, are returned as Hindus.

† Composed of 4·8 Jews and ·2 of Buddhists, Unitarians, Theists and unspecified.

*In this Table are entered only such castes, &c., the numerical strength of which is returned in the Presidency of Bombay either at, over, or near 100,000, or which is expected to exceed that number in the aggregate of India. The Roman numerals attached to the name of each caste in the column heading denote the class to which that caste belongs in social estimation. After Bráhmans and Rajputs (including Kshatrias), come other castes of good social position, and, lastly, those of lower social position. As the forest tribes of aboriginal origin have been returned partly as Hindus partly as Aboriginals by religion the present Table contains only the number of each tribe that was returned as Non-Hindu. † In Sind very few castes were recorded separately in the course of abstraction.

* A village in which any person was enumerated on the census night has been taken as inhabited, whether it contains any habitual residents or not.

† In this Table each of the two cantonments of Poona and Kirkee has been counted a separate town. In two towns adjacent hamlets have been included, as in 1872, but as the population without this supplement would not be 5,000, the true municipal population only has been entered in class C. of Table XIX. Neither of these towns has been included in the urban class in Tables I. and XII.

‡ In Sind the Deh has been taken by the Commissioner as the unit for this Table, and this accounts for the difference between the numbers of this census and those of the last, as the territorial division of the Deh frequently includes many village sites, or Makáms.

NOTE.—Every fairly compact group of houses containing a population of 5,000 and over, and as a rule, every municipality containing that population, has been considered a town unless the Collector of the District is of opinion that it is merely an overgrown village, and that the urban population of the neighbourhood is gathered into some other place near. Conversely, in thinly peopled districts, or owing to some special reason, there are places, which contain an urban population though below the standard in numbers. These have been included amongst the towns. Cantonment limits have been excluded from this Table, but shown in Tables I. and XII.

* The comparatively small numbers of the Aboriginal tribes in British territory is owing to the large number included amongst Hindus. The total strength of the Thákur, Wárli and Káthodi tribes in British territory is respectively 96,561, 79,766 and 54,567, including those of both religions.

† In the Rewa Kántha, Mahi Kántha and the Jawhár State the tribes of Muhammadans have not been separately returned.

LIST OF CASTES AND OTHER SOCIAL DIVISIONS.*

PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY.

CLASSIFICATION.

1. The names of Hindu castes as abstracted from the schedules are arranged after preliminary revision, in alphabetical order. The classification† to which the Roman numerals in Column 4 refer is as follows :—

I. Bráhmans.
II. Rajputs and Kshatrias.
III. Writers.
IV. Traders.
V. Craftsmen.
VI. Agriculturists.
VII. Herdsmen, &c.
VIII. Fishers and sailors.
IX. Domestic or personal servants.
X. Minor professions.
XI. Devotees and religious mendicants.
XII. Depressed classes.
XIII. Labouring, miscellaneous and wandering classes.
XIV. Forest and other aboriginal tribes.

2. The names of the castes and divisions which are of enough importance numerically to be shown separately in Table VIII. of the Imperial series are printed in thick type, those that will probably be distinguished in the Provincial Returns are marked with an asterisk.‡

3. The Division in which the caste is chiefly found, or where it is indigenous, is denoted after the name.§ Where no Division is mentioned the caste is either spread over most of the Presidency, or belongs to another part of the Continent. The castes found in Bombay City are not distinguished, as they all belong to one or other of the continental divisions. This list does not apply in detail to Sind, where only the main castes mentioned above in para. 2 have been tabulated separately.

* This list includes, in addition to those castes and sub-divisions which have been universally returned as Hindu, the tribes of aboriginal origin which have been returned sometimes as Hindu sometimes as aboriginal in different blocks. It also includes the Brahmo Samáj, which have returned themselves as Bráhmans or Wánias as the case may be.

† The classification is very probably defective as regards the divisions of Lingáyats in the Karnátic, as it appears from the Occupation Tables that there are many returned under one denomination who pursue agriculture and weaving or trade indifferently. No satisfactory classification of Muhammadans has been discovered. In Gujarát the class of local converts can be distinguished from the Muhammadans of foreign origin, but the distinction is obliterated throughout the greater part of the Deccan and Marátha Country, where the terms Shaikh and Pathán cover every sort of distinction.

‡ In column 5 is shown the social grade to which it is considered that the caste belongs in general estimation, viz., after Bráhmans and Rajputs come 3—other classes of good social position, followed by 4—those of inferior position, and 5—Forest or Aboriginal Tribes.

§ Thus Guj. = Gujarát, Konk. = Konkan, Decc. = Deccan, and Karn. = the Kánarese Division.

* Amongst the unoccupied are included prisoners and except, in the case of Brahmans, mendicants; unless these latter form a very considerable proportion of the community as in Castes like Nos. 57, 58 and 59.
† In the case of the Agricultural class this column is filled in and the preceding one left blank.
‡ This heading includes in the case of the Agricultural class all occupations combined with agriculture, but in that of other classes the occupation entered in column 2 as the hereditary one of the caste, is here excluded.
§ The distribution of these two classes is omitted because the members of them are almost exclusively employed in their hereditary occupations of literary and commercial pursuits respectively.

DETAILED OCCUPATION TABLE II.

Showing the Distribution by Districts of the Chief Occupations returned.

PART A.—MALES.

N.B.—The totals as here given differ in many instances from those in the preceding statement, because in the latter the system of classification adopted allowed of the combination of several occupations under a single general designation. In this statement too, several occupations followed by a single class of persons, and which are shown elsewhere in separate groups, are entered consecutively.

* Includes some returned stone breakers, road menders, &c., and entered under those heads in the preceding Table.

† The distinction between these two classes is clearly drawn in Gujarat only. The figures differ from those in the preceding Table, because under the second heading have been brought some entries of persons in the Maratha district, evidently subsisting by regular alms as distinguished from vagrant and other paupers.

§ Including Sind and Bombay City. The ratio without them, is 99·00.

DETAILED OCCUPATION TABLE II.

Showing the Distribution by Districts of the Chief Occupations returned.

PART B.—FEMALES.

N. B.—The totals here given differ in some instances from those in the preceding statement, because in the latter the system of classification adopted allowed of the combination of several occupations under a single general designation. In this statement too, occupation, followed by the same class of persons, shown elsewhere in separate sub-orders, are taken as a single item.

* The totals here given show a difference of 158 under XIII. 1, and of 30 under XIV. 2, as compared with the Imperial Table, owing to the transfer of this number from XV. 2.

† The difference of 189 persons in this order is due to the transfer of that number to XIII. and XIV., respectively, as mentioned in the preceding foot-note. Of these 159 were cowdung fuel sellers, and 30 charcoal sellers.

‡ Adults 101,119; Children, 146,559.

The averages are therefore calculated for the survey portion of the district only. In Khándesh there is but little record of cultivable unoccupied land anywhere, and portions of the district are entirely unsurveyed. Thus some 800 square miles comprising both alienated and raiatwári lands are omitted from this return. The unsurveyed portions, however, cannot, as in Kánara, be localized, so the incidence appears somewhat higher than it actually is.

The cultivated portion alone is shown in some, and that probably with only approximate accuracy. In Hydrabad there is a very large possible return to the State from unoccupied cultivable land, a feature which does not appear in the equally fertile district of Shikarpur, owing to the incompleteness of survey. The data are, on the whole, scarcely to be relied on.
